

“A door that only opened because a man was faithful when no one was watching.”

Ronald Balimwezo did not become Lord Mayor in the first year of his service. His story spans a decade in local government, years as an engineer and lecturer, and a door that only later opened through a movement he did not build himself.

Across three volumes, this omnibus follows the years nobody applauded, the door Bobi Wine opened, and the weight of becoming a kingmaker, a study of faithfulness before an audience arrives, and the God who moves through history in ways no one plans in advance.
